

BEN SIMKIN MASTERMIND JULY 2026

The Yap Strategy

One-minute, unscripted phone videos as a top-of-funnel engine.
What happened when I tried it, and how you build yours this week.

01 WHO'S TALKING

Thirty years in video.
Eight years coaching
the people who sell it.

5

books for video business owners

178+

client businesses coached

$52M+

added client revenue

I sell high production value for a living. Hold that thought.

02 THE CONFESSION

My best content this year: one take, on my phone.

No crew. No edit suite. No script. Messy hair.

2.4K

views on one reel

saves, bookmarked to act on

03 WHERE I WAS IN FEBRUARY

Posting more. Reaching fewer.

34

posts in one month

2.7

average likes per post

1 in 10

posts got zero engagement

Everything the content calendar says to do. The feed scrolled straight past.

04 30 APRIL 2026

So I stopped performing and started talking.

Front camera, one minute, no plan beyond one idea. That throwaway video finished in my top ten posts of the quarter.

The audience voted before I'd decided if I liked the format.

05 THREE MONTHS LATER

The same voice, measured.

3.3×

average engagement per post

+333%

Facebook views in 28 days

83%

of those views: yap reels

+1,206%

one-minute completions

95.3% of it from people who don't follow me. Strangers, watching to the end.

06 THE REVEAL

It looks casual. It isn't.

01 A hook that stops the scroll

02 A framework that holds the minute

03 A theme found, not guessed

You're not competing with competitors. You're competing with the feed.

2 sec

to stop the scroll

60 sec

to hold the right person

relationship begun

Three jobs, in strict order. Miss the first and nothing else happens.

08 THE POINT OF ALL OF IT

Views are not the goal. Conversations are.

Measure conversations started, not likes collected.

09 WHAT ACTUALLY RESONATES

The data is blunt.

2-3x

engagement when the hook has a dollar figure

3x

reach on money content vs
mindset content

Raw

beats polished, on every platform, every month

Saves

are the buying signal

10 FINDING THE THEME

Your clients already wrote your content strategy.

2,450

client messages analysed

16

clients, in their own words

15

patterns kept repeating

1

theme dominated: money

I didn't guess the theme. I found it in conversations I'd already had.

11 THE OLDEST RULE STILL STANDING

Right message. Right people. Right time.

When content stalls, it's almost never a volume problem. It's the message. The yap format didn't save me. Saying the thing my market loses sleep over did.

12 THE SYSTEM

What a yap actually is.

60

seconds, front camera

idea per video

script

~150

spoken words

Say it the way you'd say it to a client over coffee.

Five beats hold the minute.

- 01 Hook. Why should I care?

- 02 Context. Where are we?

- 03 Conflict. What went wrong?

- 04 Turning point. What changed?

- 05 Resolution. So what? And a question back.

A story structure, not a sales structure. That's why people stay.

The hook is a promise. The video keeps it.

On-screen text in the first two seconds, every time. Most people watch with the sound off until you earn the tap.

THE CONTRARIAN

Video production is not free. So stop giving it away...

THE DOLLAR FIGURE

My client was charging $950 a day. We bumped it to $1,400.

THE TWO TYPES

There are two types of filmmakers.

THE CALL-OUT

Can you relate to this?

Walk through five doors into the same idea.

- 01 The story. The emotional one.

- 02 The tactic. The useful one.

- 03 The contrarian. The argument.

- 04 The belief. The reframe.

- 05 The question. The one that fills your DMs.

Five videos, one sitting, released across the week.

Four rules keep it honest.

- 01 One idea per video, ruthlessly
- 02 End on a question not a pitch
- 03 Never sell usefulness is the sell
- 04 Keep it real the numbers know when you perform

Batch once. Post five times a week. Stop the rest.

1

sitting covers the week

4-5

reels a week, no more

static text cards, ever again

My worst month was my busiest month. Every zero-engagement post was a static text card.

MONTH	POSTS	AVG LIKES
Oct 2025	10	7.3
Jan 2026	24	3.8
Feb 2026	34	2.7	busiest month, worst results
Apr 2026	9	7.6	first yap, 30 April
May 2026	23	9.0	best month in a year
Jun 2026	11	8.9

Find your money theme. It's already in your inbox.

- 01 What do clients ask me again and again?

- 02 What do they misunderstand right before they buy?

- 03 What conversation do I dread having, that they need to hear?

The answers are your first month of content.

Write your first hook. Right now.

[What everyone believes] is wrong. Here's what's true.

A client just [result, with a number]. Here's what changed.

There are two types of [your customers].

Stop [common behaviour]. It's costing you [specific cost].

20 THIS WEEK

Phone out. Front camera. Sixty seconds. Post it.

Don't buy a microphone. Don't build a studio. The feeling of being ready arrives after the tenth video, not before the first.

The gear was never the barrier. And I say that as the video guy.

The reel that went off was one take on a phone.

What's the conversation your clients keep having with you that they've never seen you talk about publicly?

Start there.
