

VBA ELITE · OFFER ARCHITECTURE · PREPARED FOR DARRIN
FITZGERALD, ARTIE MEDIA

The 365 Conference Engine.

The positioning, mechanics, pricing structure and proof strategy that move Artie Media out of the commoditised event videography market and into the role of strategic monetisation partner to conference and association owners.

A category of one

The market is full of production companies that promise to capture the magic of an event. The reality for the buyer is very different: expensive event footage sits unused because the marketing team has no bandwidth to cut, publish or sell it.

The offer positions against that reality.

THE ENEMY

The Hard Drive Graveyard

The old model. Unusable raw footage, marketing team burnout, and the frustration of having nothing to sell the next one.

THE CATEGORY

The 365-Day Conference Engine

The conference is not the finish line. It is the shoot day for a year of engagement and sponsor inventory.

The vocabulary bridge. Every message uses the buyer's own words: non-dues revenue, sponsor inventory, member retention between annual meetings, marketing team burnout, easy to deal with, nothing to sell the next one, content is king, look bigger than you are.

The promise, without hype

The core promise is honest, provable, and focused on the outcome rather than the process.

"Your three-day conference becomes 52 weeks of member engagement and sellable sponsor inventory, and your marketing team's workload goes down, not up."

THE MECHANISM 03

The 52-Tips System

To deliver the transformation profitably, the service is not an open-ended, fully managed retainer. It is a productised batch-and-handover model. One shoot, one edit block, one handover.

- Pre-event content map (remote, two sessions). Identify the sessions, speakers and themes worth cutting, aligned to the association's engagement calendar and sponsor slots before cameras roll.
- On-site capture (the event days). Multi-camera capture and an interview rig for speakers and sponsors. The event is shot for post-event cutting, not just archiving.
- The 52-Tips Asset Vault. Delivered once, batch-edited. All 52 ready-to-publish clips produced in one post-production block in the weeks after the event, delivered as a complete vault with a publishing calendar and platform-specific versions. The association's team schedules them. Artie Media's involvement ends at handover.
- The Sponsor Inventory Pack. The sponsorable slots pre-built ("This week's insight is brought to you by [sponsor]") with a one-page rate-card template the association's partnership team can sell from immediately.

Certainty for the buyer, protected scope for the business

- Defined-deliverable certainty. The vault is a counted, specified deliverable: 52 clips, with specified formats and a fixed delivery date. Assumptions and exclusions stated plainly in every proposal.
- The self-funding story. The economics positioned as an asset: associations typically price two to four sponsor slots against this inventory, and sold at market rates that covers most or all of the engagement.

Three tiers, and the gap does the selling

Tier A buys footage. Tier B buys a year of engagement and a revenue stream. Every quote is built on the four-section anatomy (pre-production, production, post-production, and a production company fee at 15 to 30%) with a 10% contingency on hard costs.

TIER	WHAT IT IS	SHAPE
A. Conference Capture	On-site capture, highlight film, speaker interviews, session records. The commodity tier, priced to make Tier B the obvious choice.	Around the current ceiling for a multi-day event.
B. The 365 Conference Engine Recommended	Tier A plus the 52-Tips Asset Vault, publishing calendar, and Sponsor Inventory Pack.	Anchored above the proven engagement ceiling. The tier the positioning exists to sell.
C. The Partnership Year	Tier B plus a mid-year refresh block (webinar or regional event capture), quarterly inventory reviews, and first right of refusal on next year's conference.	Tier B plus a meaningful margin, capped to what stays reliably deliverable.

Triggers, people and spend signals

Targeting runs on conditions, not demographics.

- Trigger. An annual conference or flagship event in the next two to three quarters. Published dates make this findable.
- Person. The association's marketing or communications lead, or the director of partnerships and sponsorship. Their fear: a flat room, and a sponsor who doesn't re-book.

- Spend signals. A paid conference with a published sponsor page, existing video on their site or YouTube, a marketing team of more than one, sponsorship tiers already priced.
- First list. US East Coast associations inside the existing network first, then the verticals touched over thirteen years. Warm before cold.

The first application

- Pilot the engine. The 365 Conference Engine runs first on the existing flagship client's next event. That creates a live proof case, and it gives a long-standing relationship a new reason for its next chapter.
- Mine the archives. The strongest past engagement written up as a case study on the before-and-after pattern, with testimonials pulled from the long relationship to support the "look bigger than you are" and "easy to deal with" themes.

THE STANDARD THIS SERVES

This architecture follows the approach VBA members apply across pricing and positioning, including the four-section quote structure covered in The Anatomy of a Profitable Quote.
